What does the Publications Catalogue contain?

The Publications Catalogue comprises all titles available. They may be consulted at the Federal Statistical Office or in larger libraries. For detailed lists of the sources of major statistical results going further back please see the presentation of publications in the Statistical Yearbooks.

All new publications are announced weekly in the "Bundesanzeiger" (Federal Advertiser), and monthly in the periodical Economy and Statistics.

For the summary publications, namely cross-section publications, subject-matter related publications, publications on organisational and methodological questions, and project reports, partly a brief description of the content is given in the first part of the Publications Catalogue in addition to periodicity, latest issue, number of pages, format and price.

How is the publication system structured?

The publications of the Federal Statistical Office form three major groups:

- summary publications,
- subject-matter series,
- classifications.

These are supplemented by publications containing international statistics and foreign-language publications as well as brochures and leaflets.

The electronic information supply is dealt with in a separate part.

Summary publications contain results from several or all fields of activity of the Federal Statistical Office. In addition to cross-section publications in the form of yearbooks and periodicals offering a comprehensive though condensed selection of data, there are subject-matter related publications imparting information on specific spheres (e.g. education, construction, energy) or allocating it to specific groups of persons (e.g. juveniles, women, families, foreigners).

In addition to general publications on organisational and methodological questions, there are the publication series "Forum" and "Spectrum" of Federal Statistics, Contributions on Environmental-Economic Accounting, Methodological Reports, and Statistical Contributions of the European Advanced Training Centre, which the Federal Statistical Office has created as a platform for the discussion of major problems in official statistics. The authors are experts not only from the sphere of official statistics, but also from science, research and education.

The category entitled "project reports" presents methods and results of statistical surveys and analyses carried out as special projects under research projects and research visits or for special purposes according to Article 7 of the Federal Statistics Law.

The results of individual statistics are published within the scope of subject-matter series subdivided into 19 large subject fields - ranging from the population to the environment. Each subject-matter series comprises publication series containing results of continuous statistics supplemented, whenever necessary, by special contributions. The results of censuses executed only at larger intervals are issued as non-recurrent publications within the respective subject-matter series.

Notes for Users

Classifications are subsidiary material permitting a uniform allocation of data within the statistics and the breaking down of results in conformity with the purpose of data collection and presentation.

The category international statistics comprises cross-section publications with selected data for a large number of countries (e.g. Statistical Yearbook for Foreign Countries) and a wide range of free data offered on the Internet at www.destatis.de ("International data"). Cf. page 115.

In exceptional cases, however, there also are foreign-language editions.

The electronic information offered ranges from our website and databases, the diskette / magnetic tape cartridge / CD-ROM service using the database, and a variety of CD-ROMs to the disk packages. This catalogue may also be downloaded in the PDF format from the homepage of the Federal Statistical Office at www.destatis.de.

How detailed is the breakdown of data by regions?

In addition to bibliographical information, the Publications Catalogue also indicates the regional breakdown of the results presented in the publications.

The Federal Statistical Office publishes the data in coordination with the 16 statistical offices of the Länder. Here the principle applies that the Federal Statistical Office primarily issues Federal and Länder results and only in exceptional cases data broken down by "Regierungsbezirke" or "Kreise".

The regional breakdown of the data material offered in the publications issued by the statistical offices of the Länder is more detailed (for the addresses please refer to the list starting on page 174).

Veröffentlichungen "Im Blickpunkt"

(Publication Series "In the Spotlight")

The Federal Statistical Office uses this publication series for the statistical presentation of topics which are of general interest. They may refer to a specific population group such as young people, women, foreign population, etc., or to subject-related topics such as living and working or the "information society".

The aim of this series is to give a comprehensive description of the topics concerned. As texts are added to explain the statistical material, the series is of great informational value both to experts dealing with those topics in political, government or private institutions and organisations or in science and research institutes and to any citizen interested in the issues discussed.

(In the Spotlight: Information Society)

format: 17 x 24 cm, price: EUR 12.80
Code number: 1021209, ISBN 3-8246-0650-X

One of the most important issues today is the change from the industrial society to the information society. The new information technologies and communication networks, especially the Internet, have an impact now on almost the entire sphere of employment and on nearly all areas of private life.

The official information and figures contained in this publication and regarding the information society show that there are many aspects to this issue. What impact has the information society in Germany on growth and employment? How many new enterprises are founded in the information and communication sector and how many disappear from the market? For what information and communication products does production increase, what goods are rather imported, and what is the price trend for such products? What is the role of the PC in working life? Is it really mostly men who have information and communication jobs? And what are the factors determining whether a household in Germany has a PC or a mobile telephone or whether it uses the Internet? These are just some aspects of the range of topics treated in this publication, whose purpose is to contribute to an improved coverage of the information society as a societal phenomenon.

different opinions on issues like these. This volume provides the facts. This publication provides tables and charts containing figures - with detailed explanations - on the age structure, living conditions, and forms of living of the elderly, and on their participation in occupational life. In addition to the presentation of objective factors, there is a separate chapter dealing with the people's subjective perception of their personal situation concerning, for instance, financial means or social contacts between the generations. The main emphasis is placed here on data from the European Community which illustrate both differences between nations and their common features. Moreover, the situation in Germany is described in detail.

The present book shows the elderly people in the Federal Republic of Germany as reflected by statistics. On the basis of the changes in the age structure of the population, it describes in detail the family bonds as well as the domestic, social and economic situation of elderly people and illustrates from the point of view of statistics their participation in political and social life.

This book is designed to present prints and figures, not showing political relationships or economic theses, but looking into the day-to-day life of ordinary men and women. Do you remember what a hard job housework used to be still some decades ago and with how little ordinary people had to make do? Have the technological and economic developments of half a century made things easier for the average citizen, have they relieved him/her from burdens and constraints, or have they made people dependent?

The photographs show our way of life as it was, how it developed and as it is today; the figures recorded are illustrated by charts.

The book provides an insight into 40 years of history, 40 years of life in the GDR.

It affords the great opportunity to get informed about the possibilities of life of the average citizen from statistical analyses, without any limits due to governmental standards and constraints. The look back into the past also is to promote a better understanding on the part of those who did not have any contacts with life in the GDR for decades.

Similar to its "western" counterpart "Im Zug der Zeit – ein Bilderbogen durch vier Jahrzehnte", the publication describes what life was like in a socialist society, the problems of the people in the other part of Germany and also their hopes and dreams.

organised jointly by the Federal Statistical Office and the German Statistical Society.

The colloquium discussed the subject of "measuring welfare" from both practical and theoretical viewpoints. On the one hand, real surveys were dealt with in papers on the European Community household panel, European reporting on social matters and the welfare survey. On the other hand, there were speeches of a more theoretical nature on measuring individual welfare and its distribution, on statistical welfare indicators, on concepts and measures of inequality and poverty, on welfare measuring in the sphere of the environment – also introducing the "contingent evaluation method" –, on the subject field of measuring national welfare and the state of the environment, and on an econometric analysis of the relation between welfare and taxation.

This volume documents the fifth scientific colloquium organised jointly by the Federal Statistical Office and the German Statistical Society.

The colloquium focused on statistical concepts and methods discussed in speeches about the measurement of employment and unemployment in international comparison, and about analyses of job dynamics using panel data of establishments from official surveys. The focus was also on specific analyses and evaluations of statistical labour market data, with speeches about the present labour market situation, approaches to a theory of employment regimes, consequences of demographic trends, the effects of labour market policy measures and marginal part-time work, and – from the viewpoints of both unions and the business sector – on statistically founded concepts for the creation of jobs and the reduction of unemployment.

The volume focuses on giving an overview of the current situation regarding the development of automated techniques of ensuring statistical confidentiality in tables. It contains updated and enlarged versions of the papers presented at the meeting of the "Working Party on Issues of Mathematical Methodology" held at the Federal Statistical Office on 14/15 October 1997. Topics are, among other things, the experience acquired with automated confidentiality techniques in the 1995 census of crafts, the hypercube method and automated suppression programs. Also, an overview is given on common techniques of de facto anonymisation of microdata and an alternative to de facto anonymisation in providing individual data for scientific analyses.

The topics of the papers range from "polarisation trends in the income distribution", "efficiency aspects of social welfare income" and "income mobility" to "servicing financial assets from the national product". Further information is provided on the data offered by official statistics on measuring poverty and wealth and on the need for information in tax reform projects.

Under the auspices of the Federal Ministry of Education and Research, a symposium on cooperation between science and official statistics was held on 31 May / 1 June 1999. The event was organised jointly by the Federal Statistical Office, the German Institute for Economic Research (DIW), Berlin, and the German Social Science Infrastructure Services (GESIS), Mannheim.

The volume contains all papers presented and the platform discussion. The authors show how it may be possible to achieve a more flexible adjustment of the programme of federal statistics to socio-political and economic issues and a stronger participation of the scientific community. They also examine possibilities of a more intensive involvement of the scientific community in the further development of methodologies to optimise concepts and techniques in statistics production. What is also discussed is the procedures of how scientists may get access to data of official statistics.

The volume documents the results of the scientific colloquium organised jointly by the Federal Statistical Office and the German Statistical Society in November 1999. The colloquium was moderated by Prof. Dr. Norbert Kloten who also gave an introduction into the topics.

The publication examines the range of today's economic research, from changing theoretical terms and models and various issues of measuring and monitoring short-term economic trends to their analysis for economic policy. The range of topics also includes papers on the split economic development in Germany after unification and on short-term economic trends in a globalised world.

In October 1999, an international conference on "Policies and Statistics in the European Union - Challenges and Responses" was held in the parliament in Berlin. It was organised by the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) and the Federal Statistical Office. About 180 guests from political, economic and scientific areas participated in the conference, whose aim was to enhance the internal and public awareness of the requirements to be met by statistics on the eve of the 21st century.

The topics were dealt with in separate groups: "transition to the information society", "regional and structural policies", "social and labour market policies" and "economic and monetary policies".

The conference volume contains the papers presented and summaries of the platform discussions.

What are typical working time patterns and what do people do after work? Are consensual unions different from marriages as regards the distribution of (time-related) duties and liberties between men and women? Based on the time use survey, these are just a few of the questions examined in "Zeitverwendung in Deutschland". Time stress and pseudo-leisure time, learning and support for children, private continuing education, leisure activities of juveniles and young adults are some other topics dealt with. With this volume, the Federal Statistical office reacts to the frequently expressed wish that further analyses regarding time use of the years 1991/92 should be provided. This should enable comparisons with future results of the new time use survey to be conducted a decade later in 2001/2002.

Better access to official statistical data is a demand frequently expressed by the scientific community and often discussed. An attempt is made in this volume to show the current state of the discussion on scientific use of business data from official statistics and to give new impetus to the debate.

The articles refer to the papers presented at a workshop organised by the Federal Statistical Office in cooperation with Prof. Dr. Joachim Wagner (Lüneburg university) on 24/25 February 1999. Discussions focused on several variants of granting access to data of official statistics, experience acquired in existing cooperation projects and proposals regarding the utilisation of microdata from official statistics. It is also shown what scientific progress might be achieved by using such data.

Important trends in survey research are the pluralisation of interview forms and the technicalisation and computerisation of data collection. Knowing about the methodological effects of new survey tools will permit, for a specific item to be examined, both to seize the opportunities opened up by new survey tools and to identify and avoid the risks that are doubtless involved.

The first nationwide time use survey conducted in 1991/92 gave considerable impetus to time use research in Germany. Nearly ten years later, the Federal Statistical Office, in co-operation with Lüneburg university, performed a stocktaking in October 2000 in the form of a workshop entitled "Zeitbudgeterhebung 2001/02 – Folgerung aus der Nutzung von Zeitverwendungsdaten".

The volume contains all papers presented at the workshop and provides insight into the relevance of time use for various scientific disciplines. The topics refer to the areas of geography/transport/mobility, leisure time, households, meal consumption behaviour and important fields of official statistics such as national accounts.

This volume focuses on an analysis of the productivity trend of the economic branches of manufacturing in Germany (old Länder) in the period 1979 to 1993, with research and development (R&D) being considered as a separate production factor. It is examined what influence is exerted by industrial R&D on the development of productivity and whether the composition of R&D (e.g. R&D performed within or outside an enterprise) is relevant here.

The methodological goal of the study is to find an answer to the question of how robust the results

At an international workshop performed in 2001 by the Federal Statistical Office in cooperation with Trier university and entitled "Sampling in Time - Problems of Data Accumulation and Data Quality", discussions were held on rotating sample designs, their applicability to, and relevant data quality for household budget surveys. The results of the conference contribute to the further methodological development of household budget surveys, that is the five-yearly sample survey of income and expenditure and the annual continuous household budget surveys.

This volume contains the papers presented at the workshop, providing first of all an overview of the plans of the Federal Statistical Office regarding the further development of household sample surveys. Also, the papers contributed by international experts provide some insight into the experience acquired so far in applying rotating samples and restructuring household budget surveys.

Competition on a stagnant market requires special behaviour by the enterprises operating there. Many strategic management concepts that are promising on growing markets will not be suitable to ensure survival in a stagnant industry. This is a challenge to the competition authorities, too. The disappearance or acquisition of companies generally leads to oligopolistic market structures, often endangering competition. Although an oligopoly in itself is not detrimental to effective competition, anti-competitive practices can more easily be enforced there than in a polypolistic environment. It is the task of competition authorities to identify and stop such practices.

Important basic material for the study were data from a primary survey conducted by the author and data from official statistics. Official statistics thus contributed much to the project's success. By publishing the study, the Federal Statistical Office supports the scientific use of data from official statistics. The intention is to point out the relevance of basic statistical data and to enhance the acceptance of statistical surveys.

Socio-Economic Reporting System for a Sustainable Society

In the new publication series of the Federal Statistical Office, calculation bases and methods as well as first results of the socio-economic reporting system for a sustainable society are presented. The purpose of the system, which is still being set up, is to perform socio-economic accounting to describe how the society has developed up to now, to show scenarios for sustainable development by means of socio-economic model calculations, and to describe the differences between the current situation and a future model-based sustainable situation by means of sustainability indicators.

The first volume of the publication series describes the concepts for a comprehensive representation of human activities by means of three types of input-output tables (incl. example for 1990): Economic aspects are shown in monetary values, environmental-economic items are explained by physical data, and time data are used to describe social connections. The study was carried out by the Federal Statistical Office in cooperation with Osnabrück university, commissioned by Eurostat (Luxembourg).

The second volume of the publication series shows how the monetary, physical and time-related input-output tables (cf. vol. 1 of the publication series) may be used for analytical evaluations. It is explained in particular in what way the tables allow to perform an integrated analysis of social, economic and ecological connections. The study was performed by the German Institute for Economic Research (Berlin), commissioned by Eurostat (Luxembourg).

The third volume of the publication series presents the results of a study concerning the care for and education of children and juveniles. Taking as an example the reference years 1990 (former territory of the Federal Republic) and 1998 (Germany), it is shown how much time was spent directly and indirectly for children and how much money was spent in connection with child care and education. The study was carried out by the Federal Statistical Office, commissioned by the German Working Group for Family Aid (Kirchzarten).

Statistics in the Democratic Process at the End of the 20th Century

Anniversary publication for the 40th Plenary Session of the Conference of European Statisticians (CES)

Edited by Egon Hölder, Carlo Malaguerra and György Vukovich

Published in 1992, English, 119 pages,

Code number: 6110010, ISBN 3-8246-0336-5

For 40 years the CES, a body of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, has been working on the coordination and harmonisation of national statistics. During that period, the statistical offices in Europe and North America have faced structural, economic and environmental problems and developed ways of implementing uniform standards, concepts and classifications across the national borders.

As part of those activities, the CES has prepared fundamental principles, the so-called "Ten Commandments of Official Statistics". The anniversary publication explains those commandments in greater detail and provides an outline of the history of the CES.

Experts from science, advertising, market and opinion research, politics and the press discussed the experience gathered during the information campaign for the population census with a view to future dialogues with the general public.

Publications on Organisational and Methodological Questions

This amply illustrated publication comprises the papers presented at the symposium and a detailed documentation of the publicity measures, informational events and opinion studies conducted as part of the public relations work for the population census (texts, polls, charts, photographs and the like).

Information is supplied, among other things, on the unsuccessful attempts of the years 1981 and 1983, the legal bases after the judgement of the Federal Constitutional Court, the scope, contents and evaluation purposes of the census, the organisational preparations made, the extraordinarily extensive and intensive public relations work, the practical operation of the census, the manual and automated processing and tabulation of the census data as well as the publication of the census results.

Also discussed are various supplementary investigations concerning for instance the accuracy of the 1987 population census results, but also alternatives to the traditional census method which open up new methodological perspectives for a future census.

Important information and working material of the census has been included in the Annex. The publication has been issued as "Fachserie 1, Heft 12" of the publications on the 1987 population census.

price: EUR 19.68
Code number: 9631310

Statistical information on science, research and technology is an important basis for assessing the performance of a national economy. The publication gives an international comparison for the OECD member countries regarding figures and methodological explanations on 25 indicators for science and technology; for Germany, a wealth of additional data are provided. Comprehensive methodological descriptions give important information on possibilities and limits regarding the information value of research-statistical indicators. Some of the indicators described also serve as a basis for benchmarking performed at EU level with regard to research policies. The report was compiled by the Federal Statistical Office, commissioned by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research.

This publication explains the concept used for determining and presenting the expenditure for health research as developed by the Federal Statistical Office as part of a research project commissioned by the Federal Ministry for Research and Technology.

The publication may help the user to interpret the expenditure for health research as it describes the methods used to obtain such data and the extent to which data of research statistics are meaningful. Since research statistics of all sectors have been included in the analysis, this project report also contains important indications for interpreting results of general research statistics.

Ausgaben für biotechnologische Forschung (Expenditure for Biotechnological Research)

Published in 1995, 180 pages,

The publication was compiled by the Federal Statistical Office as part of a research project commissioned by the Federal Ministry of Education, Science, Research and Technology.

The purpose of the publication is to facilitate interpretation of the data on expenditure for biotechnological research. This is done by presenting the definition and structure of the survey subject-matter, the collection and calculation methods and the limits of informational value provided by the results.

To meet short-term data requirements of supreme federal authorities or to settle scientific-methodological questions in the sphere of statistics, surveys for special purposes according to Article 7 of the Federal Statistics Law may be conducted covering a maximum of 10,000 respondents, without involving the obligation to provide information. This legal basis serves two purposes: First, up-to-date information can be provided in addition to the regular programme of official statistics. Second, methodological studies can be performed that are required especially for the further development of official statistics.

Research Data Centre

Forschungsdatenzentrum des Statistischen Bundesamtes

Research Data Centre at the Federal Statistical Office

The Research Data Centre of the Federal Statistical Office and the Research Data Centre of the statistical offices of the Länder, acting as an interface between official statistics and the scientific community, allow the latter to have well-defined access to official microdata.

The statistical offices offer not only to use official microdata at guest workstations in their protected rooms. Reacting to wishes expressed by the scientific community, official statistics will also considerably extend the range of scientific use files offered.

The Research Data Centres (RDCs) of the Federal Statistical Office and the statistical offices of the Länder allow access to individual data as follows:

- anonymised microdata files as scientific use files and public use files
- teleprocessing
- guest workstations in the RDCs
- special processing

At present, de facto anonymised microdata files regarding

- the microcensus,
- the sample survey of income and expenditure, and
- the time use survey

are available to the scientific community as a standard offer.

Standardised microdata files regarding

- the wage and income tax statistics, and
- the salary and wage structure survey

are currently being prepared at the RDCs in close cooperation with users and the relevant specialised departments.

Controlled teleprocessing

Using protected data stocks through remote data access is a quite recent development, whose importance will grow in the future. This allows to use the information potential of the individual data by means of self-developed program syntax. Currently, such data access is offered through the program packages SAS, SPSS and STATA. What is available for programming is program structure files allowing to check self-developed programs for syntax errors.

Guest workstations

In addition, the Research Data Centre of the Federal Statistical Office and the Research Data Centre of the statistical offices of the Länder offer the opportunity to access individual data through a guest workstation.

Stocks of individual data for which standard scientific use files are not available or not planned due to anonymisation problems or due to a lack of demand may be accessed in a well defined way through the guest workstations.

Major results obtained within the Research Data Centres will be documented in reports as part of a new publication series.

Internet

At the address

www.destatis.de

on the Word Wide Web, the Federal Statistical Office offers German and English information that is always up to date and can be utilised all over the world.

In addition to press services of the day, results are offered from all areas of official statistics. Indicators with monthly and quarterly results from business life provide important data bases for analyses.

Databases

Time Series Service

The time series service allows subscribers to access more than one million time series from the STATIS-BUND database (see also the section "Statistisches Informationssystem des Bundes, STATIS-BUND"). Information on the content of the database (incl. catalogue of definitions) may be obtained free of charge by way of a comfortable documentation and research system, whereas the data order and collect service is available against payment and may be accessed only with a personal access authorisation.

Anyone concluding a user contract with the Federal Statistical Office will receive such an access authorisation (user identification and password). The contract form may be obtained online through the Internet. The annual subscription price is EUR 25.56 and covers the provision of 200 time series per year. Any additional time series supplied costs EUR 0.05. Registered users may order the desired time series via the Internet and transfer them to their own computer system for further processing.

GENESIS-Online

GENESIS-Online is an information database allowing to do easy Internet research within the wide range of data offered by official statistics (see in the section on databases on page 124).

Gesundheitsberichterstattung (Health Monitoring System)

The Federal Health Monitoring System offers informative data and background information (see in the section on databases on page 125).

Other elements offered by the Federal Statistical Office on the Internet are methodological information and links to many other providers of statistical data. A self-presentation including the organisation chart of the Federal Statistical Office provides orientation and, as does the list of information services and contact persons, allows users to contact the appropriate staff. A small selection of publications is available as online publications for free download.

Statistics Shop

Through the homepage of the Federal Statistical Office, a virtual Statistics Shop may be accessed.

A focus here is on electronic standard products, that is collections of tables which previously were available only in printed form or as disk packages. The Statistics Shop allows customers to download the files against payment direct to their computer, thus avoiding the usual long distribution channels. Of course, it is also possible to order important printed publications. The content is continuously being extended, cf. page 126.

GENESIS-Online

GENESIS-Online is an information database allowing to do easy Internet research within the wide range of data offered by official statistics.

GENESIS (Common New Statistical Information System) is a statistical information system jointly developed by the statistical offices of the Federation and the Länder. GENESIS-Online has been developed by the Federal Statistical Office and provides external users with Internet access to GENESIS.

GENESIS-Online offers:

- various research options: search via keywords or hierarchical search via statistical subject fields.
- flexible tables, i.e. variables, or the relevant variable items, may be selected for specific table elements, and then you may start the retrieval of values.
- various output formats (EXCEL, HTML, CSV), which may be used to download the results to your own PC for further processing.
- descriptions and definitions of the statistics and variables.

The data offered under GENESIS-Online may be accessed at www.destatis.de/genesis; they are continuously updated and extended. Already in the setup stage, data from all areas of official statistics are available, however with different levels of breakdown. Focuses are on data from population statistics, employment statistics, education and transport statistics, price statistics, foreign trade statistics and national accounts.

Access to GENESIS-Online requires registration. A relevant registration form is available on the registration page. After registration, the Federal Statistical Office will send you via e-mail your user ID for GENESIS-Online, which consists of a user name and a password. In the setup stage, GENESIS-Online is offered free of charge.

For any questions or comments, please contact Genesis-Online@destatis.de.

Statistisches Informationssystem des Bundes (STATIS-BUND) (Statistical Information System of the Federation - STATIS-BUND)

The Statistical Information System of the Federation (STATIS-BUND) provides the basis for the electronic dissemination of data from many areas of official statistics. In that information system, more than one million current, and fully documented time series are stored at present. Data from STATIS-BUND are available online via the Internet (time series service) or as disk packages or magnetic tapes for further processing on the user's own computer system. The entire database is also offered as a standard package on a comprehensive CD-ROM (see in the section on STATIS – Statistical Time Series on page 158).

The database contains data from 21 subject areas of official statistics. Focuses are information on the population and major economic data such as production, turnover and employees, price indices and foreign trade. What is offered is long-term annual series, some of them reaching back to 1950, and more short-term monthly and quarterly series.

Via the Internet (www.destatis.de), within the time series service, a catalogue of definitions may also be accessed free of charge, containing some 1,600 terms used in STATIS-BUND.

Gesundheitsberichterstattung (Health Monitoring System)

The Federal Health Monitoring System (www.gbe-bund.de) provides informative data and background information. The information offered includes all areas of the health care system:

- framework conditions of the health care system
- health status

- diseases
- resources of the health care system
- benefits and the extent to which the health care system is utilised

The Federal Health Monitoring System is based mainly on existing data, systematically combining data on the health care system that are available at the most different locations.

The data are well coordinated with each other so that a comprehensive picture of all areas of the health care system is obtained.

The manifold needs for information of the various user groups are met by offering different products and forms of presentation.

Bodenbedeckung für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland (Land Cover Data for the Federal Republic of Germany)

The CD-ROM (double CD) contains geographical data on land cover in the Federal Republic of Germany which have been compiled by the Federal Statistical Office – commissioned by the Federal Ministry for the Environment, Nature Conservation and Nuclear Safety – in close cooperation with the Federal Environmental Agency. The data are part of a uniform stock of comparable data on land cover for the territory of the European Union (EU).

The information on land cover was obtained basically by evaluating satellite images from the years 1989 to 1992. The EU data collection concept distinguishes between 44 land cover categories, 36 of which being shown for Germany. The concept covers areas with a minimum size of 25 ha or, with regard to land areas with linear features (e.g. watercourses), with a minimum width of 100 m. The precise geographical location of any homogeneously covered piece of land is represented. The vector data stock is based on a scale of 1:100,000.

In addition to the land cover data, the CD-ROM contains a complete documentation of the data collection process and data examples of the information sources used, e.g. satellite images, aerial photographs, or topographical maps. The metadata documentation has been based on hypertext files and the Netscape Navigator program.

The data have been designed mainly for further processing in geographical information systems, where they represent the land cover information level.

System requirements:

Personal computer 80486 / Pentium;
main memory capacity of a minimum 16 MB;
CD-ROM drive (quad-speed drive min.);
graphics board with a minimum of 256 colours, graphics resolution of a minimum 800x600 pixel (1,024x768 pixel are the optimum); operating system MS Windows (3.1 or higher, 95, NT) or Unix.

For further processing the land cover data, a geographical information system is needed.

The price of the CD-ROM is EUR 153.39.

format: DIN A 4, EUR 45.50
Code number: 1022100, ISBN 3-8246-0569-4

The health care system, its major connections, trends and current problems are at the core of the first Health Report for Germany. In 100 subject areas, it offers to the interested public a wealth of information which otherwise is not available in that combination or is not easily accessible. It ranges from the framework conditions of the health care system, the health status of the population, health behaviour and health risks, and selected diseases to the resources of the health system, the benefits and the extent to which they are made use of, as well as the expenditure, costs and funding of the health care system.

Published in 2000, 147 pages,
format: DIN A 4, EUR 24.54
Code number: 1022140, ISBN 3-8246-0612-7

The publication discusses major allergic diseases, their diagnosis and treatment. Another focus is on the compilation of epidemiologic data. Also, the situation of patients' care and the possibilities of prevention and rehabilitation are dealt with in detail in the report. In addition, data available on economic aspects of allergic diseases have been compiled here.

The special report addresses in particular all persons engaged in research in the areas of medicine, epidemiology, health economics, health system research, etc. and experts from health care institutions.

The Gesundheitsberichterstattung des Bundes (Federal Health Monitoring System) offers comprehensive and current health-related information in the form of informative key figures also in its information system on the Internet at www.gbe-bund.de. Users may set up tables of their own based on the data stored there. For that purpose, entirely new and in that area unique methods of online analysis of statistical data are used there. Easy texts and charts complement the Internet presentation of the health monitoring system. You may download the tables, charts and texts to your computer for further processing. The information is continuously being extended and updated.
